

The Spirit Of Truth

By Rev. Madeline Montez Duffany

Dear Reverend:

I have a vision and calling from the Lord which is a constant, ongoing impression. Holy Spirit does not let me rest. Every time I get into my comfort zone, I feel more impressed. People don't understand why I feel impelled to go forward. The difficulty is that others see me remaining in the role that I am now in and come to depend on the fulfillment of such. People sometimes have a tendency to see others in the same light.

At times it's just easier to do nothing, but this makes me unhappy. How do I keep an even keel in my personal life, yet follow Holy Spirit?

Boat -----

Dear Boat:

Now, you are talking about a 'smooth-sailing' experience! That does not usually happen, because things around you will try to hamper your vision. This is when you really need to trust God and make certain you are hearing from Him, which I believe you are. Jesus Christ gave us this Great Commission, and He will not be denied. You are not called to be captive under anyone or to feel intimidated by others.

Have you read Ezekiel chapters two and three? He was among the Jewish captives when he personally saw visions of God! He was given a commission. The Word of the Lord came expressly to Ezekiel, and the Lord's hand was upon him (chapter 1:1-3). God sent him to speak to the rebellious people and to tell them of their erroneous ways.

Do you think that God still speaks to us now, in the same way? Yes, He certainly does!

Be gentle and kind to those around you. They may not understand, or they may have their own visions from God.

Obey God in an appropriate way. If you have been faithful, your pastor will understand and encourage you, if you have asked for prayer and expressed your visions to him.

Don't ever be satisfied in remaining dormant and comfortable. We have to have an adventurous spirit, willing to obey God! Keep sailing! This is God's Truth! Rev. MMD
